

STROKE TAKES FRANKFORT OFFICIAL

Tinley Man Killed By Train

Ernest Anderson, aged 42 years who has been a resident of the Tinley Park Community for the past 17 years, was instantly killed early Sunday morning when the automobile he was driving was struck by a west bound Rock Island suburban train on the private crossing leading to Mr. Anderson's home on the north side of the Rock Island tracks about two miles east of Tinley Park.

He had been in Tinley Park the fore part of the evening and his many friends were greatly shocked to hear of his tragic death the following morning. According to the engineer of this train, he saw Mr. Anderson driving on Oak Park Avenue heading off towards the crossing and whistled a number of times but evidently Mr. Anderson was either too frightened to stop or failed to hear the whistle. The engine struck the automobile directly in the center and carried it down the track for approximately 600 feet before the train could be brought under control.

It is estimated the train's speed at the time was about 57 miles an hour. Mr. Anderson's body was tightly wedged in the wrecked car and it took quite some time to extricate him.

Ernest Emil Anderson was born Sept. 4, 1899 in Chicago. He was united in marriage with Miss Alice D. Hilgendorf in 1921 who passed away in 1938. Surviving are his son Eugene, who is a Naval Aviation cadet now stationed at Hutchinson, Kansas, his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Bjork, and 1 sister, Mrs. Florence O. Anderson, a brother, Carl A. of Chicago, 2 nieces, Eleanor Steyer and Mrs. Shirley Roe 2 nephews, Richard Anderson, who is an Army Aviation cadet at Miami, Fla. also Sgt. Arthur Hilgendorf on furlough from Guadalcanal.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Tinley Park Methodist church with the Rev. R. J. L. McKelvey, officiating. Burial was made in the Tinley Park cemetery.

AN EXPLANATION

The members of your rationing board regret, very much, to have inconvenienced those of you who came to the office and found the door locked. We found it necessary to do this in order to expediate the issuance of all accumulated gasoline applications.

This work could not be done satisfactorily unless we were uninterrupted.

Due to the cut in coupon valuation a longer time was necessary to review and work each application. We found that this work was hampered seriously by accepting and processing applications which were brought into this office by the applicant himself. This is not fair to all of you who in good faith have mailed or brought in your application and we have promised to mail it to you as soon as possible.

Please bear with us, and remember that we are constantly striving to serve you better. Thank you. Midlothian Ration Board

4H GIRLS ENTERTAIN AT NEW LENOX PTA MEETING

The New Lenox PTA held their November meeting on Tuesday evening Nov. 9 at the school. These regular monthly meetings, we are proud to say, are well attended but a welcome awaits all parents whether a member or not. Attend the next meeting on Dec. 14, 8 p.m.

The 4H girls entertained by exhibiting their achievements of the past year. The Sunny Circle, led by Mrs. Wm. Allen presented an amusing skit, written by the girls, and an interesting style show. The hobby display proved we have a lot of talent in our school.

Dr. Flotow reports the newly purchased records, for which the New Lenox PTA has designated the sum of $125.00 have been played in the music appreciation hours during the past two weeks. Both children and teachers have greatly enjoyed these fine recordings and Dr. Flotow feels the PTA has made a worthwhile contribution to the school. The shrubs recently purchased by the PTA are being planted between the two front entrances around the flagpole. This landscaping will greatly add to the appearance of our school.

The Home makers are still busy sewing for the Christmas Bazaar. These various articles they are making will be on sale at the next PTA meeting, Dec. 14. Stuffed animals and hand made dolls will be a specialty and this may be the answer to your Christmas problems.

MOKENA RED CROSS BRANCH REPRESENTED AT CHAPTER HEADQUARTERS

Three representatives of the Mokena branch of the American Red Cross spent Tuesday at Chapter Headquarters at the Surgical Dressing Institute, conducted by a Representative from the area office at St. Louis.

They were informed the new quota for the United States would be eighty million dressings per month. All this material is purchased by the Army, who delegate the Red Cross Volunteers to make dressings according to the specifications furnished by the army.

It is interesting to note that 65 percent of all surgical dressings for the Army are made by Red Cross Volunteers.

With this enormous quota ahead, needless to say the quota for Will County is much larger than ever before and it is every one's duty to help fill this quota by coming to the work room. The room is open welcome and remember the Red Monday afternoon 1-4 p.m. Monday evenings 7-10 p.m. Everyone is Cross belongs to every one, not just a few.

Frankfort Lions Hear Talks By Local Service Men

The Frankfort Lions Club at their dinner Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Frankfort Methodist church, heard very interesting accounts of Army life and activities from three soldiers home on furlough. One, a Captain Maples, gave an interesting detail of his branch of the service in the Army Ordnance Department showing how Army material is handled and also the repair work done on damaged material. He went into quite comprehensive detail and on the various phases of activities of his particular department.

Raymond Smith who has been in Alaska for the past 19 months also gave a very interesting story of Army activities there. His detachment was on guard duty at an Air Base. He stated that the weather got extremely cold, the temperature ranging from 40 to 70 below zero.

Occasionally soldiers would make a trip to a lake about 7 miles from the camp, chop a hole thru 3 feet of ice to catch fish, in which they were quite successful.

Paul Lambrecht who is home on furlough from training school at Indianapolis, Ind. gave a very comprehensive review of the strenuous training which the Pre-flight students under go, of which group he is a member. He had been stationed at Miami Beach, Fla. but later was assigned to the school at Indianapolis.

The Lions are making plans for a Ladies night with a Christmas gift exchange the forepart of December.

Results of the contest are to be announced on the Nov. 27th broadcast over WMAQ at 7:30 p.m.

ABOUT XMAS MAIL

"Mail in November" does not mean Mail on November 30. Reports from large post offices indicate that little Christmas mail has been started on its way by the public, although the press, radio and business concerns are cooperating splendidly in spreading the word that November mailings are necessary this year if deliveries are to be made on time. While postal officials anticipated that their advice to the public to Mail in November would bring no very heavy mailings until about Nov. 15 it was hoped that a fair volume would be received during the first 2 weeks of the month.

Mailing of a huge volume of gifts and cards in the last 2 or 3 days of November will result in serious congestion in post offices and transportation facilities, with consequent delays. The mailings should be spread over a longer period to avoid a last-minute jam and to assure delivery by Christmas. Postal officials advise that all who can possibly do so should mail their gifts at once and mark them Do Not Open Until Christmas.

If gifts are mailed during November it is quite probable that some parcels and cards will be delivered rather early; this can do no harm. But if gifts are mailed late it is certain that many of them will arrive after December 25; and this will result in disappointment both for civilians and for members of the armed forces who are still in this country.

Should the heavy mailings continue into December it will be impossible to give any assurance of delivery by Christmas. Transportation lines are heavily burdened with war materials and personnel and these must have preference over Christmas gifts when facilities are limited. Gifts cannot be permitted to interfere with the transportation of arms and supplies to our fighting forces.

Judge J. M. Clark Former Educator Dies Suddenly

John Marion Clark, 81 years old, well known educator and Justice of the Peace of Frankfort, died suddenly at his home Tuesday following a cerebral hemorrhage. Mr. and Mrs. Clark were preparing to leave for Marseilles, Ill. where they had planned to spend the winter with their sons, when he was stricken.

Mr. Clark was a native of Ohio and in 1889, married Miss Minnie Texler. They celebrated their golden anniversary two years ago. A graduate of Columbus and Waterloo Universities, he later completed a post-graduate course at the University of Illinois. His active years were spent as an educator in the public schools of central and southern Illinois. He came to Frankfort in 1915 as principal of the Frankfort school and at that time, the first year of high school here. In 1919 Mr. Clark retired, and with the exception of a few years in central Illinois, spent the remainder of his life in Frankfort where for the past ten years he served as Justice of the Peace. He is survived by his widow and three sons, Dr. Floyd M. Clark of Danville; and Drs. Paul R. and Ted R. Clark of Marseilles; also five grandchildren. The body lay in state at the Frankfort Methodist church Wednesday evening, where services were conducted yesterday afternoon with the Rev. Rudolf Malek officiating. Burial was in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

PROGRESSES BACKWARD

"A blurb recently emitted by the OPA with intent to shame complainers about rationing," says the Portland Oregonian, "tells us that our forefathers did without sugar until the thirteenth century, without buttered bread until the fifteenth, without potatoes until the sixteenth, without coffee, tea and soap until the seventeenth, without gas, matches and electricity until the nineteenth. A common comment on this record is that that our forefathers also did without the OPA."

Our forefathers also did without false teeth, safety razors, patent toilets, and thousands of articles too numerous to mention. They didn't have department stores, chain stores, milk in bottles, canned food or bath tubs.

Eddie Rickenbacker and his companions starved on a raft for nearly a month and still lived to tell the tale. But is that any parallel we should seek to follow? If our national economy has created shortages, at a time when surpluses are needed, we can do without as our forefathers did if necessary.

Our planning and energies, however, should be directed toward increased production and progress, the constant aim of our forefathers.

KEY ECONOMIST OUT

Handsomeness, platinum-haired Ed Stettinius, acting secretary of state, telephoned "Assistant President" Jimmy Byrnes, asked that he call a meeting of the War Mobilization cabinet to consider cancellation of war contracts where foreign countries are involved. Already various war contracts are being cancelled, and some of the cancellations, especially those involving the purchase of metals, mean breaking commitments to foreign governments.

Byrnes agreed, called the meeting. On the morning set Stettinius phoned again.

"We've got to call off the War Mobilization cabinet meeting," he said.

"Why?" asked the puzzled Byrnes. "Feis has resigned," replied Stettinius. "He's the expert on foreign war contracts." He was referring to Herbert Feis, economic adviser to the secretary of state.

"Well, can't you come to the meeting and present your views to the cabinet?" suggested Byrnes.

"No," replied Stettinius, "Feis is the only man who knows anything about the subject."

The special cabinet session was postponed.

Note: Herbert Feis, related by marriage to the late President Garfield, is a distinguished liberal economist appointed by Secretary of State Stimson under Hoover. His resignation was handed to Hull shortly after the resignation of Sumner Welles, at which time Hull began to sweep out liberals. When newspapers revealed this clean-out, Hull held up acceptance of Feis' resignation, left word that it be announced while he was in Moscow.

DIES COMMITTEE DYING

The Dies committee soon will release an interim report, listing the various Nazi and Jap groups which operated more or less openly in this country until Pearl Harbor under the names of tourist bureaus, trade associations, etc.

It will be prosaic, less sensational than previous reports, with a back-handed slap at the administration for permitting such things to happen.

Employees of the committee are bemoaning the report's mildness. Committee funds are getting to the point where the house must be asked for more, but maybe the dough will not be forthcoming unless Dies can throw the house something far more sensational.

The only thing sensational that forthright Martin Dies can drag out now concerns Communist influence among the Negroes, and he hesitates to do this, fearing nation-wide repetition of the Detroit race riots.

WHEAT UNCERTAINTIES

Though no announcement has been made, inside word in the agriculture department is that wheat farmers will get a loan price of 90 per cent of parity, which is a 5 per cent increase over this year.

Officials recognize that something attractive must be done to increase wheat plantings. As it looks now, plantings are going to fall below the high goals set by the government—an acreage increase of 14 million over this year.

This year farmers had the 85-per-cent-of-parity loan, which acted to support the price, plus both parity payments and conservation payments. But congress has knocked out parity payments for next year, leaving a margin of uncertainty as to whether wheat will bring as much as flax or grain sorghums, or some other crop.

Planting is now well along in the winter wheat belt, but it is reported to be a slack planting. Never has there been so much demand by farmers to know what the price is going to be. And the official answer is still withheld.

And when the announcement is made, it will be a loan figure of 90 per cent of parity, whereas farmers would like to have 100 per cent, to make up for the loss of parity payments.

All this confusion comes at a time when there is a greater demand for wheat than this country has ever known. In addition to the tremendous demand for wheat for flour, 450 million bushels have been used for animal feed in the past 12 months, and still more will be needed for the same purpose in the next year. And beyond that, the government has pledged another 50 million bushels for foreign relief.

All this explains why the gates are being opened again to imports of wheat and barley from Argentina, for the first time in quantity since the drought years.

16 Italians Die for Shooting of Nazi

Mourning relatives gather around the fresh graves of 16 Italians who were killed by the Nazis in retaliation for the shooting of a German soldier. The soldier had stolen a chicken from a local family. Inscription on the cross reads: "They died from the forces of Nazism and Fascism." According to reports from Italy, this scene is common in many towns through which the Nazis are retreating before the might of Allied armies which were steadily rolling toward Rome and Berlin.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

BLACK SOMBRERO

Elsa Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is cut off from the will of her Aunt Kitty, who died from an overdose of morphine. Barry Madison, an amateur detective, and Hunt Rogers, a professional sleuth, go to Mazatlan, Mexico, on a yacht cruise with Margaret and Dwight Nichols. Arriving there they find that Elsa and her party have preceded them by plane. They dine at the rancho of Elsa's father, Sam Chatfield, whom Rogers questions about his visit to his sister Kitty, in Los Angeles, the night she died. Later Sam Chatfield addresses his guests on the subject of Kitty's death, and asks that Rogers conduct an examination. Rogers cross-questions the entire group and discovers that each has a motive.

CHAPTER VIII

"Thank you, Dwight. And you, Margaret?"

"Not guilty, Hunt," Margaret said with a smile.

Rogers paused as if debating the propriety of his next question. "You told me once, didn't you, Margaret, that you too might be said to have a motive?"

"Yes," answered Margaret frankly. "I was jealous of Kitty; and she was out to take Dwight away from me."

"Don't be absurd, dear," Dwight Nichols interrupted.

"I'm not, darling."

"I had a motive," said Elsa impulsively, recklessly. "I hated her. I'd hated her all my life."

Sam Chatfield looked thoughtfully at his daughter and was about to speak when Berta, her white teeth flashing, her eyes moving almost roguishly, declared:

"I had a motive too, and Sam; the sister was inhospitable, insulting to us. Such a scene! It made something"—she pressed her plump, beautiful hands to her bosom—"something inside very—very mad. With both of us."

In this curious haste to confess motives, Rogers' face was full of interest; a faint smile played about his lips, his mild blue eyes shifted swiftly from one to the other of the group as each one spoke. After Berta had spoken silence fell upon us. Rogers remarked:

"All these things, of course, I've known. There remains only Reed Barton's motive." He glanced at Reed, who sat stiffly in his leather pantaloons, as if to ask permission for what he was about to say. "Reed has said that Katherine Chatfield can be blamed for his father's suicide—it was over a matter of some mortgaged property which could have been saved by a little leniency upon the part of the deceased."

"Now, then," he paused, as if uncertain where to go from this point—"according to the estimate of the coroner's office, Katherine Chatfield died some time before midnight; discovery of the body was not made until about seven the following morning. Everyone here has a motive of some sort—perhaps even Chesebro has a motive. It would be odd if he were the only person lacking one. Until he can be questioned in this connection we'll not know definitely. Moreover, whether or not he was there that night—had opportunity—"

"If it's Chesebro you're talking about, Hunt, he was there," came the husky voice of George Rumble. "There? That night we're speaking of? I must be certain."

"Sure he was there. I saw him come away."

"How about his going in? Did you see that?"

"No, I didn't. I'd walked down the street after I got thrown out, and when I came back by there, Chesebro was coming out. Perhaps you've noticed how he's treated me, Hunt—like a yellow dog—from the first time I contacted him. Well, I think that's the reason for it. He's acted like he was afraid of me, or that I might tell on him."

"That's interesting," said Rogers, rubbing the side of his large nose thoughtfully with a forefinger. "Our circle widens."

"I saw plenty of other things that night too. But they never meant anything to me until now, because I always thought the dame committed suicide. You put a different light on things, Hunt."

"Whom else did you see?"

"I saw Reed Barton," and he turned a meaningful glance upon Reed. "He was coming out just as I was trying to get in to hand her the bill for my work."

"But Katherine Chatfield was alive when you got in to see her?"

"I'll say she was alive; she was clinkin' on all sixteen cylinders when I saw her."

"But you didn't leave the vicinity of her home after you—got thrown out? Is that it?"

"Right."

"Did you enter the house a second time?"

"No."

"How long did you stay around thereabouts? And why?"

"I stayed because I was mad. 'George, I kept talking to myself, 'you got to cool down before you go in again.' When I got to talking to myself you know something is burning me. And that dame sure did. My apologies to you, Chatfield; she was your sister."

"Don't mention it," Sam Chatfield, absorbed in the conversation, roused to reply to Rumble. "I am aware that Kitty was a peculiar woman."

"Oh, maybe an hour. Not right in front of the house, Hunt, you understand. I'd walk down to the end of the block and loaf a while then come back. About the second time I done that I see Mrs. Nichols get in a car standing in front of the house and drive off."

Dwight sprang out of his chair and walked over to Rumble. He seized him roughly by the shoulder.

"Are you accusing my wife of killing Kitty Chatfield?" he demanded harshly.

"No. I'm just telling what I saw that night."

"Don't, darling," said Margaret. "He may be right at that."

"May be right?" repeated Dwight, puzzled.

"Well, then, is right," said Margaret defiantly.

Dwight let go his hold on Rumble and straightened up, passing a hand across his face uncertainly.

"Who was it who ran out of the house, Margaret?" asked Rogers.

"He didn't see me," she said. "He couldn't have known, I'm sure, that I was behind the drapery. I lost my courage; I couldn't go on with it. Talk with Kitty, I mean."

"Who was it?" pressed Rogers.

"I'll tell you who it was, Hunt," Rumble's voice replied. "I can see she don't want to tell. But the guy passed me down the walk a little ways, where a street light hit him full in the face." I glanced at Margaret. I thought that she was about to faint; her eyes were on Rumble, fascinated, hypnotic. Rumble took his time, realizing that he held the spotlight. Finally he said, "It was Reed Barton."

Dwight Nichols sat back with an air of relief, picked up a cigarette and lighted it, and filled his lungs with smoke. Margaret settled into her chair with a little sigh. I looked at Reed Barton. He was like a man bewildered. Suddenly he became aware that we all were staring.

"George Rumble is a liar!" he said quietly.

There was little or nothing left to be lugged out into the open that night. For a time Hunt Rogers continued to explore skillfully into the hidden angles of what already had been revealed. At length Elsa interrupted.

"We're wasting the evening, Hunt," she said, getting to her feet and imploring him with her eyes to quit and let us go outside. For from out of doors came the sound of music, of dancing feet, of voices lifted in song. The members of the household, grown tired of waiting for the signal to start, were already trying their skill.

"All right, Elsa," Rogers yielded with a smile, "on the condition that I may question any one of you later, if it is necessary to clear up cloudy points."

"Of course," Sam Chatfield agreed. "And I thank you, Mr. Rogers. You've managed to throw light into several dark corners. If at any time I can be of service to you, please command me."

Rogers' reply was lost in the general movement of the group to the scene of the festivities in the open courtyard just beyond the patio wall where a low platform had been built over hollow jars to magnify the sound of the nimble feet and clicking heels.

"Oh, senora," Rogers detained Berta as the others moved out of the room.

"Yes, senor," Berta replied, pausing expectantly and looking up at the tall figure.

"This morning," Rogers began, "near the stables an old dog was put to death with chloroform. I was told that you gave the drug to the man for that purpose. Is that true?"

A blank note greeted Rogers' question. For a moment Berta continued to stare upward at her questioner.

"No, it is not true," she said suddenly. "I know nothing about any chloroform. It is unthinkable that such a drug would be on the rancho, senor."

"Thank you, senora," said Rogers, and he bowed to her.

George Rumble caught up with me as I strolled through the patio in the direction of the dancing platform. He put his hand on my arm and walked several steps with me before remarking:

"You know, Barry, Hunt's got me to thinking the same as he does. Somebody sure as heck croaked that old gal back in Pasadena. But why does Reed Barton want to lie about it? I ain't wrong. I'm not lying. I saw him; and I don't forget a face. He acted like he was scared to death—runnin' down the sidewalk. I think he got into a car down around the corner that night. Because there was one pulled out in about the time it would take for him to run there, get in and drive off."

"Anyway, George," I said, "it's up to you to prove it. Margaret says she didn't see who it was; Reed says you're lying. Who is going to believe you?"

"You know what?" George Rumble said emphatically. "I think the old lady was dead when Barton ran out of the house."

"You may be right."

"You know"—he paused, as we reached the grilled doorway to the open courtyard, "I'll bet I could run that thing down—find out who killed that woman." Someone passed us in the darkness, and Rumble reached out to detain him. "Chatfield, I was just telling Barry that I think I could figure out who killed your sister. I'm going to try it, anyhow."

"Well—I wish you success, Mr. Rumble," replied Sam Chatfield courteously. "Don't you want to come on out into the plaza now? I'll find you a seat. We've got some interesting dancers among the workers on the rancho. They are putting on most of the show for us. A few people may come out from town to join in or to watch, as they feel like it."

"Sure, we're coming. It's business with me. I'm always looking for talent. I never know where I might find something or somebody I can promote—like I have Elsa."

"There's a Yaqui dance just getting started. You mustn't miss it."

Rumble and I found seats on a bench in an enlarged circle under the open sky. There was an air of festivity pervading the crowd. The air was heavy with perfume drifting down upon us on the soft night air. A burst of firecrackers startled the edge of the crowd, but they soon popped themselves out. The odor of cooking came from the kitchen where in the ruddy glow of charcoal fires women still were patting tortillas.

Two men on the platform were doing the Coyote Dance. To the beating of a flat drum, and the chanting of the lone drummer, the dancers, swinging lowered heads, their feet moving in an intricate sidewise shuffle, backed slowly to the rear of the platform. To a brisker tempo they galloped forward, only to repeat the maneuver over and over. Coyote skins stuck with feathers of the turkey, eagle, woodpecker and hawk hung down their backs. As the dance began to take on a monotonous air, Rumble wearied of it and got up from the bench and disappeared. A moment later Elsa crowded in beside me.

"Did you just get here?" I asked.

"Yes," she answered in my ear, and snuggled against me. I put my arm around her and we sat for some minutes while the beating of the drum and the chanting Yaqui voice went on.

"I'm not the same person in Mexico, Barry, that I am at home. This is a man's country, not a woman's. So what does all my talk about economic independence mean down here; and finding myself, and running until things go dizzy inside of me? Was I being silly, Barry? Mexico gives me a sense of deeper, more fundamental things—"

"You're just being Elsa," I said. "Adorable as always, and desirable and lovely."

"Please, don't say things like that, Barry. I feel very contrite for my madness this morning. I went in just now to apologize to Jimmy the Cheese. Even though I still hate him enough to kill him, I thought I should apologize for my un ladylike behavior this morning. It was very humiliating for me to have to beat him like a dog. And, honestly, I didn't know about his heart. That's what makes it so embarrassing for me now."

"And did you apologize?"

"He was asleep. I spoke to him but he was lying very quietly, and, oh, so bandaged! Did I do that, Barry? I came away without disturbing him. Probably the next time I'll not feel contrite and he'll never know that I want to apologize."

The dancing continued; the drum, the chanting voice, the dancers who each were now astride a long bow, which they beat, as they would flog a horse, with a split bamboo stick, as they shuffled nimbly and galloped about, began almost to weave a spell upon the spectators.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

HONESTY IN ALL THINGS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:15; Leviticus 19:11, 13; Luke 19:1-10, 45, 46.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not steal—Exodus 20:15.

Honesty seems to be so obviously right that one might expect it always and everywhere—if bitter experience had not indicated the opposite to be true.

As a matter of fact, dishonesty has become so common that a person who is strictly honest is a bit of a novelty. Some even think he is peculiar.

Under such circumstances the Christian needs to be vigilant lest he also accommodate his own ideas of honesty and begin to justify little evasions rather than being absolutely upright.

The teaching of Scripture on this matter is very plain.

I. Honesty and Fair Dealing (Exod. 20:15; Lev. 19:11, 13).

The very commandment against stealing implies that men have a right to that which they have made, earned, or saved. If no one had property rights there could be no stealing. Some of our modern isms deny such rights, but their reasoning is clearly not biblical or Christian.

"Thou shalt not steal" forbids every kind of theft, and the passages from Leviticus indicate that this includes more than robbery or ordinary stealing.

It relates to every kind of false dealing with another, such as oppression or the withholding of just wages. That, too, is stealing in God's sight.

Perhaps we ought to be more specific and apply the truth to our own day. Stealing includes such things as loafing on one's job, "borrowing" money from the cash drawer, taking goods from the stock with which one is working, stealing another man's sermon and preaching it as one's own, "lifting" material out of another man's book without credit, contracting debts which one can never pay, using false weights and measures, adulterating food or other material, "watering" milk for sale, selling worthless stock, dodging taxes or lying to the tax assessor, or using a slug instead of a nickel in the telephone to escape proper payment.

One might add gambling (which is taking another man's property by skill or by chance), making an unduly large profit on the labor of another, making money out of the sorrows and failures of others, etc. To be honest means to be fair—and that has broad implications.

II. Honesty and Restoration (Luke 19:1-10).

The reality and thoroughness of Zacchaeus' conversion was indicated by his willingness to restore all the money he had unjustly (but legally, note that!) taken from his fellow citizens—and that in fourfold measure.

Insofar as it is possible to do so, the honest person will make right any known injustice. To be right with God must mean that we are to be right with men. The testimony of many Christians could be presented to show that they have only entered upon real peace and usefulness as they have made consistent effort to right every wrong, to pay every debt.

Often such actions open opportunities for Christian testimony and point others to the redemption in Christ, which makes a man live right as well as talk right.

III. Honesty and Religion (Luke 19:45, 46).

One might think it unnecessary to urge honesty upon religious folk. They ought to be honest. But here we see in sharp contrast to the quick honesty and restitution of Zacchaeus, the stubborn disobedience and dishonesty of the priests in the temple. Jesus had already cleansed the temple of the traffic in money-changing and the sale of animals for sacrifice practiced there (see John 2:13-17). On that occasion He rebuked them because they made His Father's house "a house of merchandise."

Had they known the change of heart of a converted Zacchaeus they would have heeded His admonition. But they did not believe in Christ and went on with their ungodly desecration of the temple area until it became "a den of thieves" (v. 46).

What happened so long ago needs application to our present day. So apt is the quotation from the "Lesson Commentary" which we have used before that we repeat it now.

Speaking of "the goings on in our own churches" the writer says, "Is a church honest when it assumes obligations that it cannot meet, and is then forced to use all sorts of questionable means to raise money for the benefit of the church? Is a church honest when it turns a building consecrated to the worship of God into a restaurant or a theater, Is a church honest that turns its pulpit into a lecture platform for the discussion of current events or the review of popular books or plays?"

World Supply of Sulphur In Popocatepetl Volcano

Throughout the year there is snow around the rim of Popocatepetl, volcanic peak in Mexico and fifth highest peak in North America. Patches of snow also exist inside the crater, but a visitor may also see large fields of sulphur.

The depth of the sulphur bed has been estimated at 1,000 feet. Millions of tons of sulphur have been taken out by Indian workmen. If the world ran short of sulphur this bed would provide enough to last many years. The crater is half a mile wide.

Popocatepetl rises 3½ miles above sea level. The name was given to it by Aztec Indians and means "smoking mountain." The Aztecs have a legend that it is a god. When angry the "god" trembles, making an earthquake or sending out a flood of lava. "Old Popo" has had ten major eruptions in the last four centuries. The last was in 1802. Since then it has done little more than grumble.

Dear Folks:

Well I have to change my address again. I have been moved from the address I gave you to a different one. I'm starting right in Radio school Monday. I live in a small private room, 3 men in each room.
Oh boy, is that different from our barracks of 200 men. So if I'm not too much of a pest here's my new address:

Richard E. Nitsche, S-2-c Co. 18
Sec. A. University of Chgo. Chicago
37, Ill.

P. S. I hope you can read this letter as I had to write in a hurry.
Oct. 12, 1943

Dear Friends:

I guess it is about time I wrote you a few lines. Everything is OK, out here it is warm but the nights are cool and so are the mornings.
It seems that you cannot keep up with me because I have been getting the paper from Idaho and I am in California. But I get everything and it feels OK to read the paper from home it makes you feel like you are home.

I want to thank you for the box
I got and that helps a great deal.
I want to thank you now because I am packing now to leave California.
I will try to write sooner next time.
Nothing more to write so I will finish packing. Thanks again for everything. So long.

Citizens Service Committee

Dear Friends:

90 miles away, so near and yet so far. It seems as though the little town of Tinley Park is completely unreachable to me now. At least it will be for awhile.

We haven't our uniforms as yet and probably won't get them for another month as the Supply Department is rushed right now. Still when on duty I am in uniform with my white nurses uniform and army overseas cap and insignia.

We are busy working 8 to 12 hours a day. Also we have classes of a military nature.
We are learning to drill on the tennis court here, which is situated at the bottom of a cliff. All of our Patients that are able to get up line up at the top of the hill to watch the "rookies."

It's all very new and interesting and everyone is very friendly. In other words I like it very much as I know I would. Thanks to everyone for the gift. It makes you feel good to know the home town is thinking of you.

Sincerely yours,
Lt. Marianne I. Moss ANC 772857

On the American food front, as on the industrial front, the accent is on Production.

Farmers are being called upon by the American soldier and the American family to attain, despite wartime labor conditions, grain, meat, vegetable, butter and egg, dairy quotas believed impossible a few years ago.

Like their fellow producers for Victory on the production line, farmers have adapted electricity to a multitude of chores once done slower and by hand.

Helping raise food for freedom is highly important among the wartime jobs electricity is doing.

Electric Power Speeds Food Production

The vast grain and dairy farms of Illinois are vital sources of the nation's food supply.

Elevating, grinding and processing feed for livestock is a farm job electricity does well.

Milking, traditional farm chore, is done today by electricity; other dairy tasks, too, are done with power.

Electricity has gone to war — don't waste it!

Freight cars have it. Fighting men have it. Doing the world's toughest jobs, they have to have stamina—lots of it!

Cars must be big and strong... big enough to carry sixty to seventy tons; strong enough to stand the tug of the giant locomotive, like links in a chain to pull thousands of tons in the other cars of long wartime freight trains. And to stand up under this treatment, year after year, takes stamina—plenty of it!

Brute strength is built into all types of railroad equipment. Railroad is a tough business... stamina without stint is required to provide the rail transportation necessitated by the war.

ROCK ISLAND, because of its stamina, is now speeding its full share of the men and materials of war; and when final victory comes, a rugged ROCK ISLAND will be ready then to serve the increased transportation needs of tomorrow's greater America.

... as yesterday—and today—so tomorrow ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

MOKENA

Augustana College,

Dear Editor:

First I wish to express my thanks to you for sending the News-Bulletin to me. Although I receive considerable mail from friends there are many things in the paper that are of interest to me. The Air Corp doesn't leave much time for us to read but there is always time enough for news from home.

Mail call is our pleasure.

Being back in school again seems a little unusual but much to my advantage. Augustana is a college and Seminary of the Swedish Lutheran church. I think it is quite a privilege to be attending a College of this caliber. Our day is taken up by Math, Physics; History; Geography and Physical Training classes. At present I receive swimming instruction four days a week for physical training. Also have a drill period each day. Saturday night and Sunday Open Post privileges are granted covering for the most part Tri-Cities.

Next week or soon after I will receive preliminary flying before leaving for Classification. This is supposed to cover ten hours in the air over a period of three to four weeks. I have never been in a plane before so it ought to be a thrilling experience. The more new experiences one encounters the less the tendency for Army life to become dull.

So far I am glad that I selected the Aviation Cadets as the branch of Service that I wanted to serve in. It is interesting and offers many advantages for learning.

It is nearly time for bed-check so I shall close for now. Thanks for your thoughtfulness and for listening.

Sincerely,

Edward Lauffer.

Dearest Mom:

Italy is somewhat like Wisconsin in landscape only damper. Mom here is a poem I composed while on duty.

"On Guard"

As I stood on guard last night, And watched the moon go down, It was a beautiful sight I heard not a sound.

Until at first very faint, There came to my ears, A hissing sound one seldom hears. Astonished at first, I was compelled to sit,

A snake was creeping into our Machine Gun pit.

Now the story of that snake was told As in the morning it lay cold

Its measurements were 45 in. long, As the story passes on it gets pretty strong.

THOSE who are trying to guess what is going to happen to big-time baseball and football next season are trying to outguess destiny and fate.

It all depends on the length and progress of the war. If the war swings into 1944 at an increased pace or tempo, if it moves into a new fury through another spring, there will be no big time competitive sport.

Or, if there is, it will be on a minor scale. This can all change if Germany cracks and the European end is in sight. For once the European turmoil is over, Japan's doom, whether short or long, is as certain as the rising and the setting of the sun.

There are those who believe Germany will toss in all the towels she can reach before spring. There are others who look for another bitter year of battle. I happen to be among the few who don't know and who have no guess to make.

If you can tell me what will happen in the war through the next six months, I can tell you what will happen to sport.

There are two schools of so-called thought. One school has this idea—in an army and navy of ten million, a few hundred football and baseball players would make little difference on the war side.

But those men could keep the two big games going for the morale and entertainment of the war forces and the home front.

The recent pennant races, the World Series, and the leading football games, college and pro have proved this.

They have been inspirational factors, using less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of those needed to fight.

The other school believes that able-bodied men capable of playing football or baseball should be in the service on the active side.

This school can't understand why trained athletes should be exempt while millions, who are not trained athletes, are sent out to be killed or wounded.

I happen to agree with the latter school. It is my belief that the trained athlete should get first call for war service.

I stick with the old Greek angle that an "athlete" is one trained in sport and competition for the service of war.

Otherwise sport is on a completely commercial basis.

Among the Baffled

I can easily understand why so many people are badly baffled when they read about star athletes, turned down for war service when they can still play football and baseball . . . when they can still outrun, outjump, outmarch and outfight hundreds of thousands who lack the physical equipment of those called to the active war duty.

And don't think that many hundreds of thousands of mothers and fathers who have sons in the service are not thinking along these same lines.

All of this, of course, is up to the draft boards and army or navy regulations.

It carries no reflection against any able-bodied athlete who is not in uniform.

Sport has done an enormous job in this war. It has gone unbelievable leagues beyond the First World War. This applies especially to ball-players, football players, boxers, golfers and tennis players.

But in spite of this, draft boards plus army and navy physical regulations, have passed up any number of athletic stars who would have been far more useful at the front than they could be at home. For these men would have been, or should have been, natural leaders.

War needs personal leadership, from a four-star general down to a corporal.

If the athlete can't give this, then sport is a rather useless enterprise.

In my opinion there should be no exemptions of any sort simply because the athlete was needed to keep the sporting game going.

Sport in this country, as in England, is essential. But it should be provided from the war side, not from the civilian side, except in the cases of those under 18 years old, or those beyond 33.

Once again it should be remembered this is all up to various draft boards plus army and navy regulations with no reflection on anyone not in uniform.

More About Racing

The bigger a game gets to be—the sharper, keener and more intelligent supervision it needs.

For one example, I can give you the difference between racing in New York and Chicago.

In Chicago they have seven stewards covering each race. They watch every move a jockey makes. Around New York tracks, which double any Chicago play, there are only some two or three stewards in action who have no possible chance to see everything that happens.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER loved to collect bric-a-brac and so do we. She also liked the graceful green of a trailing vine. Because of this there was a vogue in her day for what-nots and wall brackets. Each sea shell, each figurine, each tiny animal of porcelain or pottery had its bit of sentiment. Woodworkers, both amateur and professional, leaned towards the sentimental, and hearts were a favorite theme for their cut-out designs.

This sketch shows a set of these quaint wall brackets in a living room of today. They will delight the host of modern amateur woodworkers who are rigging up work benches and wondering what they can make. This 14-inch shelf with matching side brackets fills a large wall space in a most attractive way, making a perfect setting for many small treasures.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a full size pattern for all the pieces of this shelf and the two side brackets with a complete list of materials and directions for making. Patterns are 15 cents. Ask for Pattern No. 263.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

Hothouse Lambs Hard to Raise; Expensive Delicacy

Sheep born in the fall and early winter, when sold in the suckling stage between two and four months of age, are known as hothouse lambs, says Pathfinder. The animals not only have to be raised with special care, but they constitute only one in about every 25,000 sheep slaughtered here annually.

Consequently, their meat is a rare and expensive delicacy and most of it is purchased by fine restaurants and other luxury trade.

The Rubber Shortage is behind us but the Tire Shortage is still here!

Less than two years ago America faced as frightening a situation as any country at war ever faced.

Unless something was done, and done quickly, we would soon be without rubber.

And without rubber, no plane could fly, no tank could move, no ship could sail, no truck could roll, people could not get to work, materials could not move to and from plants.

That was the situation the Government and the rubber companies had to lick inside of two years if America was to stay in the war.

Did the "impossible" really happen?

Let's see what you think. Right now, there is nearly enough rubber to meet our essential needs.

Today, this threat to American victory is merely an unpleasant memory, because Government, the Rubber Director, and a group of industries—rubber, petroleum, chemical, alcohol—working together, compressed into less than two years a job that would normally have taken a dozen years. But . . .

Because the public saw huge synthetic rubber plants shoot up almost overnight, and heard that synthetic rubber was in large-scale production, they figured the tire headache was almost over.

Now—a warning!

This is the situation today—the rubber supply crisis is past, but the long predicted and anticipated tire shortage is with us.

Why is this so, when thousands of tons of Government synthetic rubber are now being made?

Why is this so, when the rubber industry is producing a tremendous tonnage of rubber products and more airplane and truck tires than ever before?

Because, as the Baruch Committee foresaw—the fact that few tires could be made until we had our synthetic rubber supply well on the way, resulted in millions of tires going out of service without replacement—and those remaining have less mileage in them. Inventories of prewar tires are gone.

Because our military needs are way beyond anyone's anticipations.

Because the rubber companies must use a lot of their manpower and machines to make bullet-sealing gas tanks and hundreds of other rubber products for war, in addition to tires.

Because half of today's requirements are for heavy-duty, large-size truck, bus, combat, artillery, and airplane tires, requiring many, many times the labor and materials of peacetime needs . . . and finally . . .

Because the manpower shortage hangs over the tire industry as it does over all industry, and there are just too few hands for the job.

Straight from the shoulder

These problems will be licked when our enemies are licked. Meanwhile, we want to tell you frankly that unless you, and all tire-owners continue to make the preservation of tires a vital personal problem . . . our home-front transportation will break down and slow up the war production of America.

The way out is for you to conserve the tires you've got—stretch their life in every way you can.

How to make tires last longer

Do no unnecessary driving.

Live up to the government regulation—don't exceed 35 miles an hour.

Keep your tires inflated up to recommended pressure, and check them every week.

Avoid hitting holes in the road, or bruising your tires on curbs or stones. Don't start or stop suddenly. Slow down for sharp corners.

See that your wheels and axles are in line.

Switch your tires from wheel to wheel every five thousand miles, and have them inspected regularly for removal of foreign objects and repair of cuts.

And—most important of all—recap your tires as soon as they become smooth.

Though not all civilians will be able to get synthetic rubber tires in the near future, you may be one of those who will. Therefore, you should know . . . and remember . . . these facts:

FACTS ABOUT PASSENGER CAR TIRES

The synthetic rubber tire is not yet an improvement but it will keep your car rolling through the emergency.

In many respects, the new synthetic rubber tires are an unknown quantity.

How they would behave at the phenomenally high speeds of prewar days is purely academic. The patriotic citizen knows that high speeds wear out his treads far faster than the recommended speed of 35 miles per hour, and drives accordingly.

Under-inflation, driving over rough roads, and other abuses are bad for all tires—but today's evidence is that synthetic tires will stand less of these abuses than the tires you have been used to.

But, since these tires will be rationed to you in trust for the nation, it will be your duty to take every possible care of them, and to prevent misuse and abuse.

As we gain more experience with synthetic rubber tires, more and more things will become known about them, and the public will be kept informed.

If you use synthetic rubber tubes, be sure they are properly installed. They should be put into the tire, then inflated, deflated, and inflated again. And they should never be mounted on rusty rims.

FACTS ABOUT TRUCK AND BUS TIRES

On truck and bus tires, particularly in over-the-road, inter-city service, the situation is less satisfactory.

Truck and bus tires are operated under more severe conditions than passenger car tires. They are heavier, thicker—generate more heat. They are all too frequently overloaded, must travel on any kind of highway their work requires.

Again we'll be perfectly frank about it: synthetic truck and bus tires now built will not stand all the abuse that the prewar tire would take, especially overloading. Progress is being made every day—but overloading which damaged a prewar tire can ruin today's synthetic rubber tire.

The Tire Industry is bending every effort to solve the serious problems of furnishing satisfactory and sufficient tires to the truck and bus field.

But a serious threat still exists to our most vital transportation.

So remember this—while the treads of present truck and bus tires are vitally important, the carcasses of these tires have a value to our truck operators, and to the nation, that is beyond price. Unless these tires are made to last and last, there is almost certain to be a breakdown of truck service.

Every one of these tires must be recapped the very minute it needs it—before any damage is done to the carcass. Speeds must be cut down, especially on hot roads. Overloads must be eliminated. Proper inflation is a necessity.

Operators, garage men, drivers, all have a heavy responsibility that they cannot now avoid. These are straightforward statements. The warning must not go unheeded. A new tire warranty recognizes these conditions, but the real job is conservation!

A new warranty—

With conditions as they are, and synthetic rubber in its present stage of development, a new tire warranty has become necessary and has been adopted. It applies to all tires. Under its terms, injuries such as bruises, body breaks, cuts, snags, and heat failures, as well as tread wear are not subject to adjustment consideration.

Nor are injuries or failures which result from improper tire care or misuse or abuse. This includes failure as a result of overload, excess speed, improper inflation, or other non-defective conditions. Or when tires are used on rims not conforming to Tire and Rim Association Standards.

Remember—the tire industry, the Rubber Director, everyone is working together with all their energy, as they have from the outset, to keep America's wheels turning.

Do your part—take care of the tires you've got now!

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Of the 125,000 communities in the United States, 54,000 have no rail connection. They depend on rubber tires for their existence and their contacts with other communities. They rely solely on buses, trucks and passenger cars.

Reduction of the national average mileage of passenger cars to 5,400 miles a year through rationing has proved an important factor in rubber conservation. An idea of how this mileage is regulated will be understood when it is known that 55 per cent of the country's cars are operated on "A" gas ration books alone; about 25 per cent have "B," and 20 per cent have "C" books for supplementary supplies.
